

Meg Mulhall Biography

Meg Mulhall is a fourth year political science concentrator at the University of Michigan. Interested in the field of urban planning, Meg is also pursuing a minor in urban studies and hopes to go on to earn a graduate degree in this area. Because of these aspirations, her research interests for the ATLAS Center internship center around ways to safely integrate alternative modes of transportation into the urban built environment.

Meg is looking forward to the opportunity to work with experts in urban planning and transportation safety and hopes this internship will further pique her interest in pursuing education and employment in transportation planning in the future.
